The Department of Pathology at Northwestern University Feinberg School of Medicine seeks a full-time non-tenure-eligible Clinician-Educator at the rank of Assistant or Associate Professor. Responsibilities include assisting the Director with clinical, teaching, and research activities of the division. The successful applicant will have a demonstrated history of excellence in molecular diagnostics and the division works closely with others in the department, including hematopathology, surgical pathology, and neuropathology. There will be resources and opportunities for development and expansion of research interests within the Diagnostic Molecular Pathology and Cytogenetics laboratories, and in the NuSeq Core in the Center for Genetic Medicine. Coordination of research efforts across these laboratories to support oncology and other clinical groups will be essential to the success of the Division as we strive to lead the nation in the era of personalized medicine. There will also be many opportunities for mentoring and teaching medical students, residents, and fellows, as well as for service on department, school, or university committees.

Qualified candidates will hold an MD or MD/PhD and be board certified in CP or AP/CP and board certified/eligible in molecular genetic pathology from the American Board of Pathology. The candidate must be eligible for an unrestricted medical license in the state of Illinois. Fellowship training in molecular genetic pathology is required. Rank and remuneration determined by qualification and experience.

The start date is negotiable and the position will remain open until filled.
